Can I use last year chemicals?

The answer is yes and no. While some products do "winter over," others may pose hazards or become totally useless.

Follow this handy guide to determine which of your leftover chemicals are worth reusing.

• Liquid chlorine has a relatively short shelf life and will have lost most potency. Consider it useless.

• Muriatic acid winters well and can still be used for acid washing and PH control.

• Sequa Sol (a stain protectant) and Algimycin 2000 (an algaeicide) winter fairly well, although Sequa Sol may have crystallized and the algaeicide may have thickened.

• Test reagents, regardless of storage conditions, should be replaced each spring.

• Solid chemicals tend to pick up moisture over long storage periods. Although they may have become a bit lumpy, soda ash, sodium bisulfate (dry acid), and D.E. (diatomaceous earth) should do their jobs.

• You should always be careful when opening solid chlorine containers, but be especially careful when opening old containers. Keep your face well away from the container to avoid contact with chlorine gases that can build up over the winter.

NSPS offers FREE water testing and tons of pool & spa chemicals. Bring a sample of your pool or spa water to Ben or Ed today!

Know the Facts Before you Buy Online

While Raypak recognizes that the internet is an important source of information and a growing channel for selling many products, we strongly believe that pool heaters are not appropriate products to sell over the internet.

We want to ensure that everyone who purchases a Raypak pool heater gets the full benefits of their purchase. The only way customers can be certain of full warranty protection and unmatched performance is if they purchase a Raypak heater from their local pool professional. While Raypak cannot prevent internet resellers from offering Raypak products for sale, we do not authorize online retail sales of any of our pool heaters. We ask that you consider carefully the following before making your purchase decision;

Raypak's Internet Policy

1. A pool heater installation does require experience and training and heater installations should be left to pool professionals.
2. The Raypak Installation and Operating Manual clearly states on the cover "Installation and service must be performed by a qualified installer, service agency or the gas supplier".
3. There are plumbing considerations that can affect the life and operation of the heater.
4. Pool heaters shipped across the country one at a time are often mishandled and damage can occur.
5. Your local pool professional is available to show you the proper operation of the heater to ensure you get the most out of your purchase.
6. In the unlikely event of a problem after installation, your local pool professional will deal directly with Raypak to help expedite any service requirements.
7. An internet purchase can affect your warranty.
